From the editor's desk

This issue marks the eighth year for the current editor of the journal, now in its sixteenth year of publication. In each issue the editorial board has tried to bring sources, documents, and articles of historical or genealogical connection to the area of Original Muscogee County. That policy continues in the current issue: the second part of Edwin L. Cliburn's genealogical memoir of the Langdon family and its connections in Columbus. Cliburn's careful and warm account has generated a wide interest among our readers.

A "snapshot" of Columbus in 1864 (at least of the white male population) is presented with the voter registry of that year. The details of voter occupations indicates not only the wide social distribution of voters but also the significant industrial importance of Columbus in the final stages of the Civil War. We also continue with another installment of the Riverdale Cemetery records.

Some Society members may be unaware of a quiet contributor to the area's genealogical resources. For several years Carol Johnson was a devoted transcriber and abstractor of legal, church, cemetery, and land grant records. She also served with Lea Dowd as a manager of the Society's web page. Members of the Society are grateful for Carol Johnson's fine work. The Society also lost to death a wonderful gentleman and long-time member, Gordon Adolph Cumbaa, and a recent enthusiastic member, Gina Noreen Paradise. We extend the sympathies of the Society to the families and friends of each.

As always, readers are encouraged to submit, or call to the editor's attention, materials and articles for publication in the journal.

*THE FAMILY OF WILLIAM PETERS LANGDON AND LIZZIE GRAVES LANGDON, 1877-1927:
A GRANDSON'S MEMORIES*

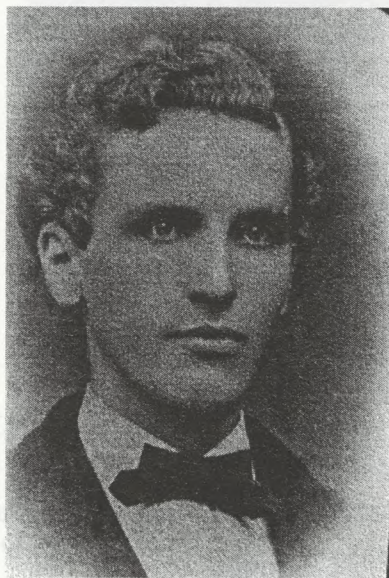

by

Dr. Edwin L. Cliburn

This reminiscence is devoted to the lives, home and family of my maternal grandparents who resided in what is now called "The Historic District" of Columbus.

My Langdon grandparents were humble people, never rich in this world's goods, but they were millionaires in the things that count. They both possessed and imparted a wonderful sense of family values to all who knew them. One of the most beautiful virtues that I witnessed and experienced as a part of the household could be called a "care package." The care they always gave to one another still astounds me. When I was young, I did not fully appreciate this careful spirit which so shaped our family life; but after more than 50 years of ministry and dealing with hundreds and hundreds of families, I came to realize how much God blessed me in my family circle. In the Bible, the Apostle Paul wrote in I Timothy 5:8: "But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." No one could ever charge the Langdons with this sort of infidelity.

WILLIAM PETERS LANGDON & LIZZIE GRAVES LANGDON, GRANDMA AND PAPA

These photographs were taken at the time of the wedding of William Peters Langdon and Lizzie Graves Langdon on December 20, 1877. He was 28 and she was 21 years of age. They would live together to celebrate their 55th wedding anniversary. They always lived at either 716 Broadway or 725 First Avenue in Columbus.

At this point, you have already learned a lot about my grandparents. In their early years friends and family called them Willie and Lizzie. I called them Papa (pronounced as Pap' paw) and Grandma. But let's take a closer look at them and their life together.

Unfortunately, I know little about their early lives or schooling. The 1870 Florida census records that my grandmother was enrolled in school. I am sure they each attended one or more of the academies which flourished in the mid 1800's. Public schools as we know them did not exist when my grandparents were young.

How did Papa and Grandma meet? One can readily speculate on this. When Grandma moved back to Columbus from Quincy, Florida, she was probably about 15 years old and still attended school. My grandfather, by that time, had reached up to 22 and had his schooling behind him. Thus it seems fair to assume that they did not meet in school. However, they lived less than a block apart at the time they would have been courting. While they went to separate churches, Papa to the Presbyterian and Grandma to the Baptist, they could have met at church for in those days congregations often met together, particularly when one had a preacher for a given Sunday and the other did not. I also know that Papa worked for J. Kyle and Co. when he married and that John Schnell, who had previously married Grandma's first cousin Frances Sauls, worked for the same establishment. Perhaps they passed their first words as he walked home from work and passed the Saul's house and saw her sitting on the porch with her sister and Fafee.

I do know that Papa had a touch of romance about him. At some time during their courtship, he gave Lizzie a book of poems by William Cowper. There is no date of publication in it, but in that beautiful handwriting of his he inscribed: "To Miss Lizzie Graves from her friend WPL." That book is on my desk beside me as I write these words. She treasured the book and kept it all of her life. While its pages cannot now be turned without literally falling apart, it still speaks of love.

Death and grief invaded the joy of Grandma's engagement time. Her younger sister Ettie, who had been born in Quincy, Florida on May 16, 1861, died on May 20, 1877, in Columbus. I can imagine the sorrow in Grandma's young heart as they buried her sister in Fafee and Uncle Billy's lot in the Linwood Cemetery in Columbus. Another link with her past had been broken. Perhaps this grief helped to cultivate tenderness in Willie and Lizzie's relationship.

After an appropriate time for mourning, Lizzie and Willie married on December 20, 1877, at Uncle Billy's home on Broad Street. He was 28 and she 21. Willie was very tall, over 6 feet 3 inches, while Lizzie was on the shy side standing only about 5 feet 3 inches, but they made a handsome couple.

After marriage they moved into the Langdon (the old Peters house) home just down and across Broad Street. In that time, young couples frequently lived in the home of one of their parents. Perhaps before they married, and surely by the time their first child was born, he had built a large room on the northeast corner of the Langdon house. Papa always believed in operating by cash. He kept careful journals of what he spent. I tend to believe that he had the room ready for them when they married. That room was large. It must have been 16 feet square and had a twelve-foot ceiling, so much larger than all of the other rooms in the little house.

One of the most exciting events to occur in Columbus after Willie and Lizzie married took place almost at the front door of their home. On May 6, 1879, the Ladies Memorial Association or Daughters of the Confederacy, at least some such organization, erected the Confederate Monument in the park in the center of Broad Street. Being in the middle of the block it is right in line with the north boundary of the Langdon property, just a few dozen yards from the front door of their house. The ladies invited President Jefferson Davis to come and speak on the occasion, but I do not think that he did. I always heard Grandma talk about Papa helping in some way and that they placed a box under the monument and that in that box is a bottle of whiskey.

First let me tell about Papa's occupational life. Like his father, he became a merchant. He plied his trade as a shoe man. In the late 1870's and early 1880's he worked for J. Kyle as the manager of the shoe department.

By 1886, we learned from those informative city directories that he had a new job at J. K. Orr and Company which was located on Eleventh Street between Broad and Front Streets. He stayed with this company into 1897. At some point in this intersection of time, the J. K. Orr Company moved to Atlanta. Mr. Orr wanted Papa to go with him, but his roots were too deep in Columbus. He did not favor going to that bustling new city. He elected to stay in Columbus. Mr. Orr asked Papa what he could give to him as a gift for his faithful service. Papa picked the little desk that he used at work and brought it home. Today it sits in my living room.

Descendants of William Peters Langdon

In 1897, probably prompted by the Orr Company departure, Papa decided to go into business for himself. He rented a store building at 1038 Broad Street and the Langdon Boot and Shoe Company, W. P. Langdon, proprietor, opened its doors. The probable date for the beginning of this venture falls sometime in 1897, for on May 18 he deeded the house to his wife. This would protect their home in the event of a business failure. Uncle Frank, Frank Morton Langdon, who started his clerking career in 1896-1897 with the J. A. Kirven Company, moved one block down Broad Street and went to work for his father in 1898-1899.

Unfortunately, some time in 1899, Papa's business closed. Thankfully, he had possessed the foresight to protect his home and the house he built on Broad Street. At the time, he and Lizzie had eight children still living at home. In this family when someone went to work, he or she paid room and board. No doubt this helped in that lean time when the boot and shoe business walked in the wrong direction.

While Papa worked for the Kyle and Orr Companies and went into business for himself, Grandma was busy on the home front. It can be summed up with the words hard work and childcare. Let's double back and take in the home scene. First and foremost, children came with great regularity. Look at this chart of their names, what I called them, and the dates of their births. From the time of their wedding on December 20, 1877, until Uncle Henry was born on November 26, 1898, approximately 22 years, Grandma had 9 babies. This means that she spent about one-third of her time being pregnant and almost all of it looking after small children.

I'll take them from the oldest to the youngest and tell what I know about them until about the time that they married.

FRANK MORTON LANGDON

Uncle Frank, Mama's oldest brother and the first child of my grandparents, was born in the home on Broad Street on October 4, 1879. Obviously, he got a lot of attention from his mother, his grandmother, and his Aunt Ellen. Uncle Frank was the one who endowed his Aunt Ellen with the sobriquet "Wawee."

*Frank Langdon

Being the first child, he has his picture taken more than any of the rest of the children. Grandma kept a framed collection of Frank's photographs on her bedroom wall until she died. A few pictures of him have survived.

When Frank got old enough to go to work, he followed his father into the mercantile world on Broad Street going to work for the J. A. Kirven Company. Next, he worked for his father at the Langdon Boot and Shoe Company. When that business failed, he went to work for the Central of Georgia Railroad as a clerk.

Uncle Frank was the first of the children to marry. He and Mary Emma Bradford, always called Mamie, wed on November 18, 1903, when my Mama had just had her 9th birthday. Mamie had been born in Tallahassee, Florida, the daughter of Robert F. Bradford and Martha Whitaker Bradford on October 18, 1880; and she came to Columbus about the time of her marriage. At first they lived in town, on Fourth Avenue and then on Second. But around 1917, they moved out into the Wynnton area to the house that was home for the rest of their lives. At one time, Mamie, being very industrious, operated a dairy. The town literally grew out around them.

Frank was always a leader among his siblings. In spite of the fact that he was the shortest one of the brothers and probably made less money than most of them, they always respected his leadership.

BESSIE LANGDON

Aunt Bessie came next, being born on December 18, 1880. Like Frank, she was born in the house on Broad Street and could remember her Grandmother Langdon along with all of her Langdon uncles and aunts.

Frank and Bessie (left) play with friends

Wawee always treated Aunt Bess like her own child and so they had a very special relationship. Obviously, Frank and Bessie played together. A faded photograph records a moment of that time in their lives.

Bessie was the second child, first daughter, and the first tragedy among the Langdon children. Bessie's awful time came as she approached adolescence, a year or two before Mama's birth. Bessie began to develop acute scoliosis. It was as if the top of her body was compressed.

Mama said that her spine curved inward toward her breast bone. This made her very short. She would not have been tall any way, but I am sure she was less than five feet in height. This disability caused Grandma to become very protective of her. No doubt she was spoiled. After graduating from Columbus High School, she never married and she stayed at home, taking in sewing while she was young. At some time in the early 1920's, when Aunt Bess was getting into her 30's and her father was forced into retirement; she went to work at J. A. Kirven Company,

WILLIAM BARKER LANGDON

By the time Grandma was waiting for the birth of Uncle Will, William Barker Langdon, Papa got busy arranging for a new home on First Avenue. The house was about 10 years old and he bought it from his next door neighbor, Mrs. Sarah J. (William) Salisbury. The purchase was made on April 4, 1883. You can read more about that house in a special chapter. Beside the records at the courthouse, only one document survives which deals with the purchase of a new home. It is a note to "Willie" from Mrs. Salisbury telling him that the house would be available as soon as Judge Pou moves out. They did not move in immediately. Papa may well have delayed his move in order to collect several months of rent from Judge Pou.

These two photographs of William Barker Langdon show him close to the ages of 11 and 19.

He always liked to dress-up.

Aunt Bess used to look at these two pictures and say that I resembled Uncle Will in this period of my own life. I have had people ask me if I was his son.

That would have been his style. Another reason for delay will be explored later; he may have wanted to add a room to their new home. Perhaps they waited on the birth of the new baby. William Barker Langdon was the third child, and the last one to be born on Broad Street. His date of birth came on September 12, 1883.

His father named gave him his own name, William, for a first name; and the middle named honored Emma's husband, Joe Barker. Uncle Will once told me that on a beautiful December morning in 1883 his father picked him up in his arms and carried him "through the garden" to his new home.

He, of course, did not remember this, but his mother did and often told him about it.

Aunt Bess always doted on Uncle Will. When they were small, he was her little brother. She always called him Buddy. They were within three years of each other's age and grew up playing together.

Uncle Will finished high school and got a job with the railroad, but he did not stay there very long. One morning my long-legged grandfather was walking up Broad Street on his way to work when he ran into Mr. Rhodes Brown, president of the National Bank of Columbus. Mr. Brown stopped Papa saying, "Willie, you have a house full of boys. I need a young man to be our office boy. Send one of them by and I'll give him a job." Papa dispatched Uncle Will. He started as office boy, but his thoroughness soon began to earn him promotions.

Uncle Will and Mae Duncan, my Aunt Mae, were part of a large group of Columbus young people who used to "do things together" on Sunday afternoons. I remember once seeing a picture of such a crowd with both of them in it. They married on March 5, 1911. He was 27 and she had just had her 29th birthday. They started out living with the Duncans in their Second Avenue home.

William Barker Langdon and his wife, Mae Duncan Langdon, about 1919 with Billy Mooney.

Willie and Lizzie were proud of their new home, and once they moved in their lives settled into a rhythm: looking after a growing family, going to work, keeping a garden, milking the cow, cooking large meals everyday from scratch, sewing to make clothing, and doing all those other things so common to family life in the closing years of the 19th century.

Sometime after moving in, a photographer happened by one morning and the family members who were there at the time gathered for a picture. The list included, left to right, Grandma, Aunt Bess, Uncle Frank, Wawee, probably Charlie Boy Sauls, and Aunt Cath.

CHARLES CLEVELAND LANGDON

Charles Cleveland Langdon, the fourth child, and third son, to bless the Langdon home arrived on February 2, 1886. I have often wondered where Papa and Grandma got his middle name. There were no other "Clevelands" in the family tree. Actually, I believe he was named for President Grover Cleveland, then serving as the 22nd President of the United States (he also served as the 24th President). Cleveland was the first democratic president elected after the Civil War, and people in the South rejoiced beyond measure because it ended an era of oppression by the northern-dominated Republican Party. I've had the sneaking suspicion that Papa used this means to honor the South's great hero. His name was Charles, but most of the family called him Charlie. Many in my generation knew him as Charchie.

Lizzie Langdon and Charles Cleveland Langdon, her third son

about 1919*

One of Charchie's first jobs was with the Home Insurance Company, but by 1912 he had gone to work as a bookkeeper at the Meritas Mills. Aunt Lizzie, Mary Elizabeth Hamilton, came to Columbus to get a job and fell in love with hard working Charles Langdon. He was 27 and she was half way between 24 and 25. They married on August 10, 1913. This was the third marriage in the Langdon family. They made their first home up on Hamilton Avenue.

Aunt Lizzie was the daughter of a Methodist minister of the North Alabama Conference. This marriage prompted my grandmother to make a remark that Aunt Lizzie loved to talk about in later years. Despite the fact that Grandma had been christened at St. Luke Methodist Church in Columbus, when she came to live with Fafee she found her way into the First Baptist Church of Columbus and became a most devout Baptist. Frank and Will had both married Methodist girls; so when Charchie married a Methodist preacher's daughter it proved a bit much for Grandma. One day she exclaimed, "The devil has got his foot on me, all of my boys are marrying Methodists!" After letting us laugh about what she had just said, Aunt Lizzie then told us the rest of the story, always with a wry smile on her face. "The next wedding in the family came when Ebbie (Elizabeth) married Bill Mooney in 1915. So when the first daughter married, she married a Roman Catholic." Remember, at that time southern Protestants had a very strong anti-Catholic bias.

EVA LANGDON

Grandma gave birth to her fifth child; a precious little girl named Eva, on December 9, 1889. She rejoiced in this second daughter. Tragically, Eva died at age 4 on July 1, 1894. Of course, Mama never knew Eva, but Eva's presence was always in our house. Grandma had a photo of her mounted in a very large frame and it hung in a prominent place in bedroom. She never forgot Eva. That same photo, now in a much smaller frame, hangs on the wall beside my bed.

*Lizzie Graves Langdon with Eva,

JOSEPH ORR LANGDON

Joseph Orr Langdon about the time of his wedding

The next child, the fourth son, came into the Langdon world on October 8, 1892. Papa named him Joseph Orr Langdon for his uncle Joseph L. Morton and his employer Mr. J. K. Orr.

With four boys in the house, excitement reigned. Two stories have survived from the years when the boys were young. If memory serves me, Charlie made the most mischief. On one occasion they caught a buzzard and painted it green. Another time they tied the tails of two cats together and turned them loose and watched them struggle.

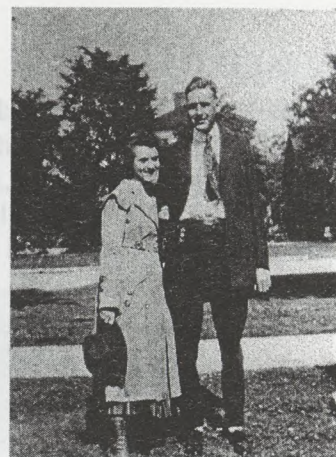

Once Joe got to his teen-age growing spurt, everyone knew that he would be tall like Papa. Right out of high school he went to Macon to work, but in jumping off a streetcar he hurt himself and had to come home. His next job was keeping books at the Royster Guano (a fertilizer) Company. He then became the cashier at the Atlantic Ice and Coal Company for a short time; but before he married during November 1916, he began working for a Mr. Betts at the big 3,000 acre Fruit Haven Farm just south of Woodbury, Georgia. He was in his early 20's when he went there and lived in the house with Mr. and Mrs. Betts, who had no children of their own. Mrs. Betts used to tell Grandma that she finished raising him. When he married Jewell Gill on November 4, 1916, he brought her back to the big farmhouse on the hill. Here they made their home, caring for both Mr. and Mrs. Betts until their deaths.

HELEN LANGDON

After a heart breaking time during her pregnancy, Grandma gave birth to Mama on October 16, 1894. Eva had just died three months earlier. Grandma poured all of her love and care into this new baby girl. Since the name Helen does not appear anywhere in the Langdon family tree, she was probably named for her older first cousin, Helen Barker, one of Emma's children.

When Mama was beginning to walk, Grandma and Papa decided to have another picture taken of their home, probably in late 1895. I do not know where Frank and Bessie were that day, but Will, Charlie, Joe and Mama all got into the picture along with the maid and my grandparents. Sometime between the picture taken in 1884 and this one, banisters were added to the front porch and it had been repainted. The favored color scheme across the years would be dark gray with white trim, green blinds, and red paint on the under pinning.

ELIZABETH LANGDON

Next, you must meet Ebbie. When she was born on October 2, 1896, Grandma named her Elizabeth, perhaps for herself. Mama and the adults called her Lib or Libba, but to me she had no name but Ebbie. No other two siblings in the family enjoyed the closeness which Mama and Ebbie possessed. They shared a room growing up; they shared each other for the remainder of their lives.

The arrival of these two little girls prompted some changes in the house. At a date that cannot be determined, a new room was added to the northwest corner of the house. It became the room for the boys. Next, a new bathroom was added to the south side of the house, just off the pantry, and where the old bathroom and a portion of the back porch had been an interior room was added. This became the dining room. The room previously used as a dining room became the room for Helen and Libba.

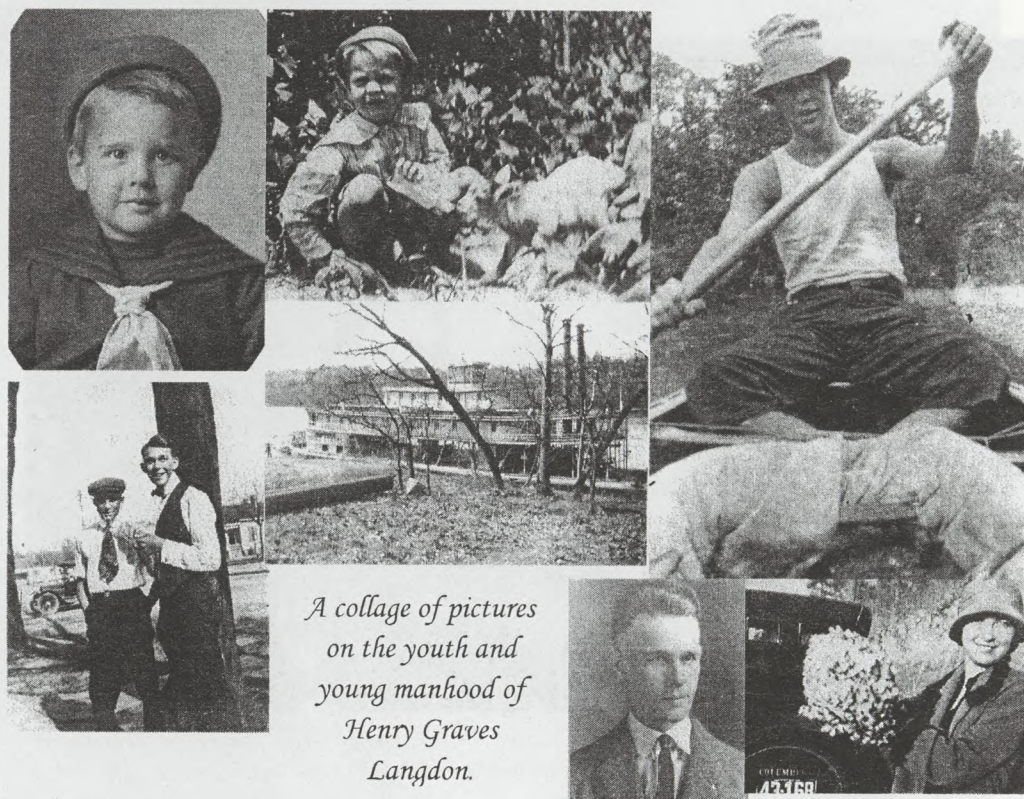

Elizabeth Langdon, "Lib or Ebbie" At the top, about 3 years old, on the left as a girl, in the center as a budding teen, on the right as a bride.

Where Mama had been over protected and had very little self-confidence, Ebbie took charge of everything and everybody. Right out of Columbus High School she went to work as a secretary for the Bibb Manufacturing Company. Her boss, William H. Mooney, Sr., a wiry little Yankee Catholic from Massachusetts, had come south to work for Bibb Mill. At the time, it was the largest textile mill in America under one roof. The twelve years difference in their ages made no difference at all. They fell in love and married on December 9, 1915, soon after Ebbie's 19th birthday. In the years before Mama married, Ebbie's Billy and Beth were her special joy.

HENRY GRAVES LANGDON

Henry Graves Langdon was the ninth child and fifth son born to William Peters and Lizzie Graves Langdon. Grandma was almost 42 years old when Henry was born on November 26, 1898, Papa was about to turn 49. We can be sure that with seven older brothers and sisters, young Henry got a lot of attention. Surviving photographs tell us that he had a pet goat.

Like Mama and Ebbie, he attended Seventh Street School. After getting out of high school, Uncle Henry went to work as a timekeeper at the Julius Friedlander Company. At some point in time, my memory tells me that he also worked for a company that operated steamboats on the Chattahoochee. By 1921 he had become a draftsman and for the Lummus Cotton Gin Company. Leaving there after a few years, he took a job as the assistant bookkeeper for the Columbus Brick and Tile Company. He and his wife, Beth Turner, married on October 22, 1925. After marriage they lived several places, bought and sold properties, probably lost one home because of the depression, but ultimately moved into a new home on Hilton Avenue.

PRIDE IN A LARGE FAMILY

Lizzie and Willie took tremendous pride in their large family. They obviously taught their children to love and care for each other. Lizzie and her maid always prepared food in abundance and meals were times for sharing. A highchair, sometimes two, adorned the dining room. As the children married and established families of their own, the highchairs stayed in place for they were often needed. When I went to live at 725 First Avenue, the two highchairs were right there where they had been for years. They never had family reunions because their children gathered so often that reunions were not needed.

The pictures that follow were special treasures. All were taken by a professional photographer and mounted in pasteboard in the style of that time.

The five Langdon boys, from left to right: Charles, Frank, Henry, Will, Joe. This picture was taken about 1906-7. Grandma kept this picture hanging beside the head of her bed. She loved all of her children, but she adored "the boys."

This photograph was taken on the same day as the one with Frank and Henry, sometime in 1902. Grandma realized that her children were growing up and wanted photographs.

THE NEW CENTURY

When 1900 closed out the family paid a lot of attention to the beginning of the 20th Century. They stayed up to welcome a new era. Mama remembered the fireworks. We know from general history that it was a time of optimism. Most protestant Christian groups were ardent in their post millennial theology which taught that the world would get better and better and that when a thousand wonderful years had passed, Jesus would return. Marvelous advances in science, medicine, education, and industry fed this optimism. The Spanish-American War had seen the United States acquire territories across the seas. The doctrine of our "manifest destiny" as Americans captivated many minds. It was the beginning of what we, one hundred years later, would label as "the American Century." Truly it was the century in which our nation became a world power without a peer.

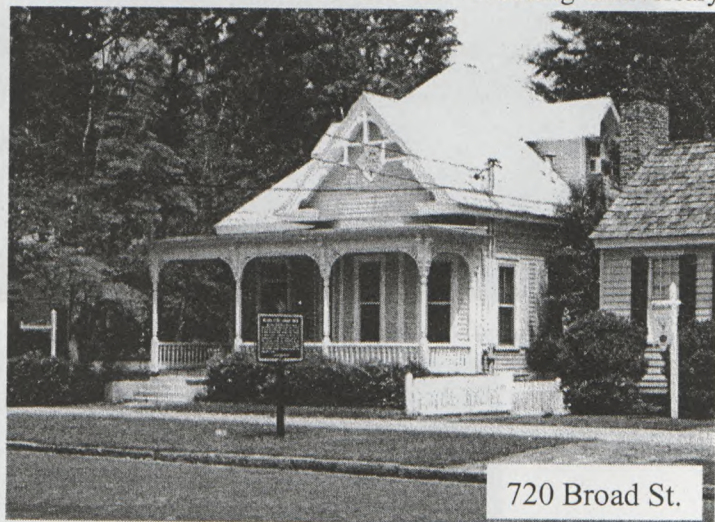

Having told a little about each of the Langdon children, let me return to Papa. By early 1900, he was now clerking for the Sarling Shoe Company. Two years later he had moved to Britt Tarver Shoe Company on West 11th Street and worked as their buyer.

While Papa was still working for Sarling, in 1907, the boys who were working gave their parents a wonderful gift for their 30th wedding anniversary. They sent them to the Jamestown Bicentennial. They went to Savannah by train and by steamship to Jamestown, Virginia. It was a highlight in their lives that Grandma liked to talk about.

By 1912, a Columbus city directory lists Papa as a salesman at the J. F. Scarborough Company. In 1914 he was working at the Garrett Shoe Store, but in 1916 he was back at the J. F. Scarborough Company. His last employment listing in a city directory came in 1921 when he was still listed with J. F. Scarborough Co. Somewhere in this time frame of his life, he fell at the shoe store and broke a hip. It mended, but left him crippled for the rest of his life. Thereafter, he always used a walking cane and limped. His employment listing now disappears from the city directories. This represents what we would call his retirement, and he was now about 72 years of age. Of course, though Papa had to stop working, he continued to keep his chickens and to plant his gardens until his very last year.

Papa's "social security" would be his little house on Broad Street, which he built in 1894-1895, after his mother died and he gained title to the north one-third of the original Peters-Langdon lot. His sister Emma had inherited a portion of the property but sold it her brothers and to her sister. Incidentally, no member of the family ever lived at 720 Broad Street. It produced rental income for the family for 71 years. The other portion of his "social security" was found in his children who banded together to see that their parents' needs were always met.

During December 1927, Papa and Grandma looked forward to their 50th wedding anniversary. Nowadays, a lot of people celebrate 50 years together, but in the 1920's most people did not live that long. Newspaper obituaries often referred to people who lived into their sixties as dying at "an advanced age." There were no trips this time, just a simple family gathering. Since I was such a young baby and travel conditions on Georgia's red-lay roads were so uncertain, we did not attend. Neither were Ebbie and Uncle Bill able to come. I am sure the gathered family enjoyed a cake at the mealtime, but all we know now is told by the photographs which follow. These pictures show my uncles and aunts as I remember them during my childhood.

The honorees at this Golden Wedding Anniversary sit side by side in the December sun. They have walked a long way together, sharing work, worry, sorrows, and joys. They now have eight living children and ten grandchildren. He has yet six years to live, she will live on for more than eighteen years. They could not then realize that in their senior years they would take in my sister and me to help give us a chance in life. As a bonus they will have one more grandchild, Arch Mooney.

Papa was a conservative person, kind and generous, but Grandma, a real matriarchal type, knew how to take charge. I often described her as "never moving into the 20th century" because until she died she still wore black stockings and ankle length dresses with high collars and long sleeves. She certainly practiced 19th century medicine. But in other ways she was progressive and up-to-date. For example, when women got the vote in 1920, she went and registered, her name first appearing on the 1921 voter's list in Columbus and Muscogee County. She kept up with current events and every day read the Columbus Enquirer from front to back. Papa and Grandma would live to celebrate their 55th wedding anniversary. While their life-spans encompassed great changes in Southern society their family ties remained secure. William Peters Langdon died on 29 July 1933 at the age of 84; Lizzie Graves Langdon survived until 27 February 1946. The memory of their devoted lives is a wonderful legacy to their children and grandchildren.

The picture at the left was a late discovery and so is included on this last page. Here are three little boys who grew up together on the 700 block of First Avenue. From left to right, they are Herbert Gregory, Henry Langdon, and Roland Day. Roland Day spent his adult life as a beloved high school teacher and coach in Petersburg, Virginia. Herbert and Henry remained in Columbus and were fast friends until they died.

Transcribed by

Hugh I. Rodgers

Editor's Note: This transcription was made from microfilmed copies of The Columbus Daily Enquirer, November 24 (A-G), 25 (H-O), 26 (P-Z), 1864. The poor condition of the newsprint has made errors inevitable, compounding existing clerical and compositor errors. Nevertheless, the list is valuable as the original no longer exists in the Clerk of Council's Office. On the fly leaf of the earliest bound volume of the Voter Registry, that for 1866, is penciled the total number of registrants as follows: "1863-368; 1864-570; 1865-542; 1866-147 [or 747?]; 1867 -none military in office; 1868-white-901, colored-586". The names appearing in the 1864 newspapers were compared to the Census Index for 1860, The Columbus Directory 1859-60, and the Register for 1866 to assist with name identification. For some details on Columbus city elections see Martin's History of Columbus, Geo. ... (Columbus: Gilbert, 1879). The names as published are grouped alphabetically by ward number but are not strictly alphabetized. A question mark in brackets indicates doubtful legibility. The original spellings and punctuation--so far as could be determined--are retained.
